The Number and Prize drawn out are opened and exhibited to the audience, and registered by the Commissioners, the Prize being placed against the number drawn. MISCELLANEOUS READING. ASTRONOMICAL SPECULATION. On Monday, the 12th, Professor Nichel,

LL. D, delivered the third of a course of lectures on A-tronomy, at Manchester. The subject treated upon had reference chiefly to the rings of Saturn, and other analogous phenomena. He referred to an observation made in the introductory lecture, respecting there being a ring, or probably several rings round the earth. What had hitherto been called the z discal light was only visible here in the form of a cone, but an American astronomer, who had gone to Japan and other favorable points to investigate the subject, found that the cone opened out and extended across the heavens from horizon to horizon; and that he had, by observation during the night, seen about three-fourths of the circle. This observer tound that we had only been looking at the ring as we might do at a hoop held edgewise, thus making it assume a coni-700 cal form. The learned professor now proceeded to say that the theory previously held that the zodiacal light proceeded from a nebulous ring round the sun, was thought to be premature, and that the appearance came from a great nebulous ring surrounding the 4 Prizes of $400 ap'g to $70,000 are $1,600 earth. He explained, by means of a dia-4 Prizes of 300 ap'g to 30,000 are 1,200 gram, that we should see the rays from this 800 ring reflected more strongly from our hori-500 zon than at its points bigher up in the hea-400 vens. No ring round the sun could explain this appearance, but one round the earth would entirely. They were forced also to the 100,000 | conclusion that it was not one ring only, but perhaps several. Its distance was about$320,000 100 000 miles; its breadth 52,000; its depth Whole Tickets $10; Halves $5; Quarters $2.50. | was not yet known; the mass of matter in it must be enormous, and no doubt it was fulfilling some important function in regard to the earth and the solar system. The composition of Saturn's rings was then discovered, and an account given of the changes which had been noticed in them, by various observ-

From the dynamical conclusion of Laplace combined with the changes ascertained, the lecturer drew the inference that the rings have no coherence; that they are neither vapor nor fluid; and gave as a theory of their constitution, that they are composed of millions of asteroids, circulating round the pla-APPROXIMATION PRIZES.—The two preceding net; the bright parts being where they are most thickly strewed, and the dark lines the absence of them. There was a faint slaty colored ring seen within the others, and this planet. It had appreached at the rate of fifty miles a year; latterly, at about eighty miles a year; and if it increased to one hundred miles a year, it would reach the planet itself in 180 years. The remaining portion of the lecture was occupied with a consideration of the cause of the sun's heat, and how it was sustained. Its heat was estimated to be equivalent to one-third of a ton of coal consamed on every square foot of its surface in an hour. A certain amount of heat would produce a certain amount of mechanical effeet; and the converse was equally true, that no mechanical effect or force could be destroyed, without involving as much heat as Do do do 10 half do 40 00 the latter part of this reasoning to the sun .do do 10 quarter do 2000 If the planet Mercury were to fall upon the 1000 sun, it would be at the rate of 390 millions of miles in a second. The lecturer attributed the sustain ed heat of the sun to vast numbers of meteor ites falling upon his surface, some of which might cause addies in the atmosphere and produce the spots which were frequently visible. After expressing his belief that, from the retarding effect of either in space, all bodies were approaching their centres, he concluded with some remarks of an impressive character.
